

Call for graduate student applications: Year-long fellowship to study at Sciences Po Paris

Application deadline: March 1st, 2017

The French Interdisciplinary Group (FIG) is currently accepting graduate student applications for a year-long fellowship at Sciences Po in order to conduct dissertation research with the assistance of a Sciences Po faculty member.

The fellowship carries no course or teaching requirement. While in Paris, the student is supported financially by a Sciences Po "allocation," the value of which is approximately equal to that of a 12-month Northwestern fellowship. WCAS has, in the past, supplemented that fellowship with cost of living support, as required by movement in the currency market. The exchange is especially recommended for students in Sociology, some areas of International Relations and Comparative Politics in Political Science, and Contemporary History.

Interested students apply through the Paris Program in Critical Theory, the selection committee for which also awards Sciences Po graduate exchange positions. To apply, students must supply (1) a personal statement explaining the importance of the exchange program for his or her research; (2) transcripts; and (3) a letter of support from their advisers.

Applications should be submitted electronically by March 1, 2017 to Dominique Licops, d-licops@northwestern.edu
