

CAMPAGNE EMPLOI LECTEURS - Rentrée 2017

Profil : Lecteur/lectrice de langue en anglais

N° de poste : 0092

Nombre de poste(s) ouvert(s) : 4 postes

Discipline : Anglais

Poste(s) à pourvoir du 01/09/2017 au 31/08/2018.

This year, the École Normale Supérieure de Lyon will hire four English-language lecteurs (native-speaker teaching assistants) to teach in its programmes in the humanities, social sciences, and sciences. This document provides information on the work these lecteurs are expected to do, their employment conditions, and the employment process.

Teaching

The lecteurs are employed within the English Department or the Language Centre (CDL). Their students, most of whom have been admitted to the ENS de Lyon via its selective concours d'entrée, are either in their final year of undergraduate study, or are engaged in graduate study (Masters or agrégation).

English Department

In the English department, lecteurs provide a valuable resource for all matters concerning authentic spoken English. They are also expected to help their students develop their literary-critical skills, and their awareness of the culture and history of the English-speaking world. Their students are English-language majors and graduate students of a high level of linguistic and intellectual ability. There are normally two lecteurs in the English department — one from a US university, and one from a UK university — and they work closely together.

Language Centre

Lecteurs who work at the Centre de langues (the ENS de Lyon's Language Centre, CDL) teach advanced English classes to ENS Lyon students in other disciplines. These language courses are specifically skills-based (ex: How to improve your written skills, aural comprehension and oral expression, etc). They also include preparation for the Cambridge exams (CAE), training in writing research papers and preparing conference presentations in English. Depending on the lecteur's experience and specialization, other courses are focused on British or American culture, on literature or media English. Lecteurs in the Language Centre develop their course content and administer their own student evaluation. They may come from any native-speaker background.

Employment conditions

Lecteurs at the ENS receive a monthly salary of around 1200 euros after all deductions (tax, contribution to national health insurance, etc), paid every month for a full year (September to August). They are also entitled to apply to rent a room in shared housing on campus, although availability cannot be guaranteed.

As per the rules governing the French university system, lecturers have an annual teaching requirement of 250 hours. At the ENS de Lyon, this is distributed as follows:

- in the English department, seven to ten hours of teaching, mainly one-on-one or small-group work in translation, listening comprehension and oral expression, for the twelve weeks of each of the two semesters (September-December, January-April), plus a more irregularly distributed but similar quantity of hours during the five or six-week period of students' preparation for the oral examinations of the agrégation (May-June)

- within the Centre de langues, the lecturers undertake two types of teaching: many classes are language lessons involving content devised and taught by the lecteur; some classes cover a wide range of lighter (in terms of preparation) activities – discussion groups, the tutoring of individuals or small groups, exam practice sessions, writing workshops, etc. As there are two distinct semesters, courses in the second semester tend to repeat those done in the first.

Study and research

ENS Lyon is one of France's leading institutions for advanced study and research, and its campus provides a rich and stimulating intellectual environment. As members of the ENS de Lyon, lecturers have full access to lectures and seminars (list at www.ens-lyon.fr > Etudes > Offre de formation), as well as to the Bibliothèque Denis Diderot, Lyon's specialised humanities research library, which is housed on the site of the ENS. They also have access to the ENS de Lyon's wide range of language tuition – including, should they require it, in intermediate and advanced French.

Lecturers with research interests close to those of a member of the faculty may gain particular benefit from a year at the ENS de Lyon. Consult the lists of faculty members and researchers (www.ens-lyon.fr > Etudes > Départements) and research groups (www.ens-lyon.fr > Recherche > Structures de recherche),

Life on campus

The ENS de Lyon campus consists of two sites that are located close together in Lyon's 7th arrondissement: the "site Monod" (mainly sciences) and the "site Descartes" (mainly humanities and social sciences). The campus includes extensive gardens, a cinema and theatre, a dance studio, music rooms and sports facilities. There is a dynamic student environment including theatre and film-making groups, very regular cultural events, collaboration with the Villa Gillet (Lyon's contemporary literature and arts centre), skiing weeks in the near-by Alps, and a student-run radio station. Both sites are very well connected by subway – and by free city bicycles – to the rest of Lyon.

The city of Lyon has a particularly active student culture, with three major universities as well as other institutions. The city is a UNESCO world heritage site with celebrated Gallo-Roman ruins, a historic centre, as well as parks, concert halls and galleries. It is within easy reach of the Alps, of Paris (two hours by high-speed train), and of the Mediterranean. An international airport (Lyon St-Exupéry) is thirty minutes away.

Recruitment

Candidates for lecteur posts at the ENS de Lyon must be native speakers of English, and have attained a level of education at least equivalent to a French first year Master's degree – that is, have completed one or more years of graduate study – in a discipline that is relevant to the teaching activities in which they will be engaged. They must speak excellent French, and demonstrate a capacity to think critically about, and teach, issues of language and translation, as well as those related to their own field of study, and the ability to adapt to the French system of concours. Teaching experience is desirable. Students engaged in doctoral work are particularly welcome to apply.

Il est donc nécessaire d'avoir validé une 1^{ère} année de Master ou de 2^{ème} cycle universitaire, ou d'être actuellement inscrit en 1^{ère} année de Master ou de 2^{ème} cycle universitaire.

(Candidates for a position as a university foreign language teaching assistant (lecteur/lectrice de langue étrangère) must provide proof that they have successfully completed a year of post-graduate study – i.e. a year of study taken after obtaining a French diplôme national de licence or equivalent foreign diploma, and which is equivalent to the first year of a French Masters degree or equivalent foreign diploma.)

Un Bachelor équivaut en France à une Licence (1er cycle universitaire) et ne permet donc pas de candidater au poste de lecteur.

In France, a Bachelor's degree is considered to be the equivalent of a diplôme national de licence (1st cycle of university studies) and is therefore an insufficient qualification to apply for a position as a university foreign language teaching assistant (lecteur/lectrice de langue étrangère).

La durée maximale d'exercice des fonctions de lecteur ou maître de langue en France est de deux ans au total (que le contrat soit établi dans un même établissement ou non).

A lecteur or maître de langue in France cannot be granted a position for more than two years in total, whether in the same or in two different institutions.
