Whatever Happened to Hybridity in Postcolonial Studies?

a talk by

Vanessa Guignery

Professor, École Normale Supérieure

April 4, 2017 at 5:00pm
in University Hall 201

Vanessa Guignery is Professor of Contemporary English and Postcolonial Literature at the École Normale Supérieure in Lyon, a member of the Institut Universitaire de France, and a recent Harry Ransom Humanities Centre Fellow. Her research focuses on literary genres and the poetics of voice and silence. This talk examines the forms and evolution of hybridity as a central concept in postcolonial literary and cultural studies.
